Former Pfizer executive Dr. Michael Yeadon told Real America's Voice in a recent interview that children are 50 times more likely to be killed by the COVID shot than they are to be killed by the virus itself.

He explains that mRNA gene technology used in the COVID shot to trigger the body to create viral spike proteins is a “fundamental problem” that scientists and researchers have known about for years because these spike proteins can lead to blood clots and other health problems.

His statement came as Pfizer tested its mRNA vaccine on children younger than 12 years old, including 6-month-old babies.

Reuters reported last month that up to 4,500 children under the age of 12 would be enrolled in the study at more than 90 clinical sites in the U.S., Finland, Poland, and Spain.

Based on safety, tolerability, and the immune response generated by 144 children in a phase I study of the two-dose vaccine, Pfizer said it would test a dose of 10 micrograms in children between 5 and 11 years of age and 3 micrograms for the age group of 6 months to 5 years.

Pfizer's COVID-19 vaccine has been authorized for use in children as young as 12 in Europe, the U.S., and Canada. They receive the same dose as adults: 30 micrograms.

As of July 1, over 4.04 million children have tested positive for COVID-19 since the onset of the pandemic, according to data from the American Academy of Pediatrics. Available data indicated that hospitalization and death associated with COVID-19 were uncommon in children.

Yeadon, former vice president and chief scientist for allergy and respiratory at Pfizer, stressed that the vaccines used against COVID-19 have not been sufficiently tested and that they shouldn't have received emergency use authorization when there are safe and effective medicines available for COVID-19.

Yeadon explained that the mRNA gene technology used in Pfizer's COVID-19 vaccine to trigger the body to create viral spike proteins is a "fundamental problem" that scientists and researchers have known about for years. According to Yeadon, those spike proteins can lead to blood clots and other health problems.

This could help explain the large number of adverse events reported to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS). Yeadon said roughly 5,000 deaths related to the COVID-19 vaccine have been reported in the first half of 2021.

"Normally, there are only about 200 a year for all vaccines combined," he said.

The CDC says the COVID shot "may now be administered without regard to timing" of other recommended childhood shots, insisting that it's okay to administer multiple injections to a child on the same day. This new stance is thanks to "substantial data" about COVID shot safety, the government agency states. Yet in the preceding paragraph on their website, CDC states that "data are not available for COVID-19 vaccines administered simultaneously with other vaccines."

The thing is, the Pfizer shot is a brand-new mRNA technology, never before used in humans – let alone young children but the Government still demands you to vaccinate your kids.
